Department of Pathology, Medical University of Vienna, Austria
Vacancy for a Full-time Biomedical Analyst (BMA) in Research Laboratories

Announcement date: tba
Application deadline: 5 May 2021

Description:

The research groups at the Department of Pathology work in both basic research and translational research in their quest to improve diagnosis and therapy. Elementary for this are the specimens that are prospectively archived in the tissue biobank. Tissue-based methods and analytical procedures are of vital importance here, and the work-up and preservation of human samples meet the highest analytical standards. We offer you a position which will allow you to become engaged in tissue-based research projects: you will be involved in the cryopreservation of human samples, in quality control, and will take on responsibility in research projects, albeit under medical supervision, to develop new methods in the fields of histology, immunohistochemistry and molecular pathology. These tasks are complemented by the application of digital methods in the field of pathology. You will work closely with the staff in charge of the biobank at the Department of Laboratory Medicine, and the task forces of the Medical University of Vienna.

Requirements:

BMA diploma
Experience in the handling of human samples (native material and formalin-fixed specimens).
Experience in laboratory routine and research with human tissue using pathology methods.
Basic knowledge of molecular pathology, histology, chemistry, biochemistry and pathobiochemistry and their application in modern analytical technologies.
Practical experience in the administrative tasks associated with tissue preservation (Biobanking) for research purposes (data base management, applications for funding).
Knowledge of process and quality management (compilation of QM documents).
Current record of continuing education activities.
Computer literacy (Word, Excel, Statistics programmes).
Team player.
Planning skills.
Willingness to take personal responsibility.
Knowledge of the English language is a prerequisite.

More information:
Go to the Job Offer Page

Contact:
philipp.hofer@meduniwien.ac.at pathologie@meduniwien.ac.at